THE CARSON RIVER.

How This Little Stream Appears to a Post Correspondent.

Editor Spring, the Post Stock and Commerce editor, who visited this section recently, writes as follows concerning the Carson River:

The Carson river roared and foamed down its rocky bed below the track. There was a full head of water in the River—more than necessary to run the quartz mills working upon Comstock ore, which are driven by its power. In a month later, when the snow fully melts on the lower foothills, a boom in the water will come and the mills will have to guard against it. Later along in the season the volume of water in the river will diminish, and at times there will not be sufficient to run the mills and supply the numerous ranches above them. The present, however, is the busy season for the mills, and with an abundance of ore from the Comstock mines, such as they now have to crush, they are making the most of it.

The Eureka mill of 60 stamps crushing capacity, was first passed. Then came the Morgan mill of 40 stamps. These two mills are, and for two years past have been, employed upon ore from the Consolidated California & Virginia mine, which has sent to them an average aggregate of about 2,700 tons per week. The Mexican mill of 40 stamps crushing power was next passed, and afterwards, in succession, the Santiago and Vivian mills, the three being employed upon ores from the Crown Point, Belcher and Overman mines. Next came the Brunswick mill of 60 stamps, which is engaged upon Yellow Jacket ore. This is one of the finest and costliest mills in the world. It can be run by either steam or water, so that when the water in the Carson river is at too low a stage to furnish power, steam can be applied, and there need be no interruption of work. The other mills mentioned are run by water power only. Further down the river, nearly as far as Dayton, there are other mills at work upon ores, slimes and tailings. The whole constitutes a very profitable industry. At the present time an aggregate of about 7,000 tons of ore per week is being sent to the mills along the Carson river from the Comstock mines, and a monthly bullion product of between $500,000 and $600,000 is the result.

Evidently the Comstock mines are not played out.

Death of Chester Rail.

On Sunday a dispatch was received from San Francisco announcing the death of Chester Rail, son of E. B. Rail of this city. Mr. Rail was in Virginia city and on receiving the news left for San Francisco. The funeral took place from Trinity Church yesterday. No particulars were received, but it is supposed that he passed away in a fit, to which he was subject. The deceased had been troubled with fits for some years, but when himself, was peculiarly bright and a musician of no mean order. He was in his 18th year and his parents have the fullest sympathy of the community.

Parish Vis t.

MR. AND MRS. G. R. DAVIS.

—On Sunday last a boy set a trap for a coyote near the North Carson Mine, when two turkey buzzards swooped down on it and one was caught. The captive was taken from the trap and in about an hour its mate was caught in the same trap. The wings measure six feet from tip to tip.

WHAT STARTED IT.

How a Woman Dealt Out Vengeance Through Kissane.

Special to the APPEAL.]

SAN FRANCISCO, April 10.—It is now pretty generally understood here that Sarah Althea Terry, nee Hill, is the one who ferreted out the Kissane story and gave it the first start that caused publicity to be given it.

In the famous trial, insinuations were made that she had been intimate with Reuben Lloyd, a leading San Francisco attorney, and that when this story was first given publicity she begged Lloyd to go on the stand and deny it under oath. He declined, on the ground that he did not wish to mix up in the trial, and after his persistent refusal, she, through some clue which she had in her possession, ferreted out the fact that he was a brother of Kissane.

The fact came to the ears of Pickering & Fitch, and as Lloyd had been instrumental in hunting up their St. Louis record they began writing up Kissane's career, and kept the attorney on the rack for weeks, but never publicly stating that Lloyd and Kissane were brothers.

It is claimed that the libel suit instituted by the Call against the Chronicle, which is set for today, and it was to break the onslaught of Lloyd on Fitch & Pickering that the Kissane matter was worked up by the Call and Bulletin. They have published much about the matter, but never hinted at the relationship between Lloyd and Kissane, expecting that Lloyd would weaken at the trial of the case, and not, as DeYoungs attorney, utilize the St. Louis records.

It is claimed that Sarah Althea has been behind the scenes in the matter all along, determining to crush Lloyd for his desertion of her in the trial, while it is also alleged that it was a chance remark dropped by her in the trial that roused Fitch's suspicions as to who Kissane really was.

Public opinion is much divided as to Lloyd. He has thousands of warm friends who keenly sympathize with him in his present troubles, and no one blames him for having a wayward brother. The opinion is generally expressed, however, that as a man of honor he should have testified for Miss Hill, and should have unequivocally denied the reports linking their names, as any gentleman would do under the circumstances.

The extra editions of the Bee continue to be eagerly sought for by the public, and the newsboys cannot supply the immense demand.
